Many of you or someone you know may have previously met Chief Salaton Ole Ntutu, Sabore Ole Oyie, Dennis Lyamuya or other Asante Africa Foundation - East Africa partners. As many of you already know, Chief Salaton Ole Ntutu has been a critical community advocate, partner and leader in many of the projects that Asante Africa Foundation has completed in his and surrounding communities.

If an African Safari has been on your bucket list – now is the time to come meet Salaton, hear the stories, ask the questions and talk about making that bucket list item a reality.

Chief Salaton Ole Ntutu is in the Bay Area for a very short time in February to meet with prospective travelers. You are invited to join us to meet Chief Salaton on February 3rd – Friday.

He will share stories, insights and challenges of the Maasai. He will share pieces of his life that might include his journey through traditional Maasai life from childhood days herding goats and cows amongst wild animals, through warriorship when he spent seven years in the African bush with little more than a spear and a blanket, into his present role as a visionary leader bridging world cultures through travels to India, Europe, and the USA.

If you have question about his visit in the USA or traveling to Africa visit Susan Olofson at 925-518-3686 or email at susanolofson@gmail.com.

Can't join us on the 3rd?

Check out other public events with Salaton having more of a program cultural learning experience.
